A DAY OF LOVE

What a day!

We planned it all
Drive into DC
Park for free on Sundays at the mall.
we have 3 hours
We park strategically.

Walking over to the other side
We made our way to Hirschhorn's sculpture garden
We're not the only ones.

On newly planned walking guides, we follow signs leading us around the sculptures.
Everyone had to wear masks and keep socially distant

We felt safe
Beautiful weather, beautiful art, beautiful garden

We walked back across the mall to the sounds of music on the greens
And made our way to the other sculpture garden at the National Gallery.

There too, everyone had to wear masks and keep socially distant
We felt safe

Finding our way to the fountains, we sat in a shaded spot.
People resting and talking in the beautiful display of world famous art and flowers, sharing a garden with masked friends.

We felt safe
We were happy

We sat down by the Pavilion fountains for our lunch.
Pulling off backpacks, we enjoyed sandwiches and hot coffee while speaking with a security guard about the gallery's collection
An unexpected treat.

We felt safe
We were happy

We walked back through the garden
Saying goodby to Rodin, Chagall, Moore and other friends
Promising a return with the changing leaves.
We were really happy.

We spent the day in DC
We spent the day with Art
We spent the day with Love.

One of the sculptures said it all
